

CLARK TO ADDRESS MEN IN UNIFORM

Speaker to Be Orator at Meeting on Ellipse Today.

Champ Clark, Speaker of the House, will address an assembly of soldiers, sailors and marines this afternoon at 4 o'clock, on the White House Ellipse, at a vesper service arranged by the committee on religious ministrations of the District War Service Commission.

On the platform with Speaker Clark will be representatives of all religious organizations in the city. The Rev. Lewis J. O'Hern, chief of chaplains of the Roman Catholic Church; Habbel Abram Simon, of the I Street Temple; the Rev. Roland Cotton Smith, of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church; the Rev. Charles Wood, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant; the Rev. U. G. B. Pierce, of the Unitarian Church; the Rev. Forrest J. Pratt, of the Methodist Church; the Rev. William J. Kerby, president of the Catholic University of America; William Knowles Cooper, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; the Rev. James D. Buhner, of the First Reformed Church; the Rev. John E. Briggs, of the Fifth Baptist Church; the Rev. G. C. F. Bronsah, dean of the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral; the Rev. Henry Anstadi, of the Luther Place Memorial Church; and the Rev. Erle Wilfroy, pastor of the Vermont Avenue Church. The Rev. Charles Wood, of the committee on religious ministrations, will be present.

Speaker Clark will be introduced by Dr. Wilfroy. Rev. Dr. Clark will offer the prayer of invocation.

A special religious concert will be played by the Marine Band under the direction of Lieut. William H. Santelmann, the leader.

Speaker Clark last night said that he considered the holding of such religious services "one of the most noteworthy enterprises yet undertaken by the District War Service Commission."

This will be the second of a series of such outdoor services on Sunday afternoons on the White House Ellipse, and will continue as long as the weather remains propitious.

Next Sunday it is planned to have one of the great orators of the Roman Catholic Church deliver the principal address.

Last Sunday was the first time in the history of the city that the Marine Band was permitted by the government authorities to play for a religious service on Sunday afternoon on Federal territory.

BUY-A-CALF MOVE! NOT FOR BELL BOYS

Capital Hotel Employees Say Cost to Keep Is Too Great.

The "Buy-a-Calf" movement, adopted by hotel men and bell boys in New York, is regarded as a huge joke in Washington. Bell boys at leading hotels here say that they would much rather buy a liberty bond.

The announcement that the bell boys at the McAlpin Hotel in New York are planning to adopt one or more calves as a means of covering the beef supply of the country, was derided last night by a bell boy who is now employed by one of the largest capital hotels. Interviewed by a reporter for The Herald as to whether Washington bell boys would aid the movement, he said:

"Where would we keep them? Of course, that is a very simple matter for the bell boys at the McAlpin, where they have a roof garden that would furnish excellent pasturage and of course where the hotels haven't meadows on their roofs, the bell boys could use the suburbs. Here in Washington, we haven't any suburbs, and as for the roof gardens, they are not used for pastures."

But, he said, it is wiser to slaughter the calves unless there is enough fodder and waste from milling operations to feed them. The fattening of cattle on broad grains, he declared, was the poorest sort of patriotism.

PURELY PERSONAL.

This Thief Not Greedy But Very, Very Hungry, So Bologna Is Missing

Police daily are setting practical evidence of the high cost of living nowadays. The latest report of such convincing character came in when Max Becker, 1825 Seventh street northwest, asked the police to try and catch the individual who became attached to twenty-five pounds of Bologna sausage, valued at $4. When he left it unguarded in his wagon on Louisiana avenue between Ninth and Tenth streets north-east.

Becker asked the police to get busy right away. He says that if they do not work fast to find the Bologna thief he will have to empty the stomachs of the suspects.

Georgette in Dark Shades Is Favored for Fine Blouses

Of course, this does not mean that flesh and white are any less popular, but that honors are now about evenly divided, with perhaps the suit shades having a little the best of it at the present moment.

One of the new models on display is in a rich shade of brown. It has a white satin vest and revers on each side of the vest of crepe piped with satin to match the color used in the embroidered design on the front; cuffs are piped to match revers. Waist is shirred on shoulders, has a collar of the crepe, which is weighted at the corners with little balls of silver-colored tinsel.

Another style is of taupe-colored crepe. This has a vest of white crepe which terminates at the throat in small revers connected with the collar of the taupe crepe by covered buttons of taupe; buttons to match ornament the front of the vest; blouse is daintily embroidered in front.

These new models are shown in Burgundy, brown, taupe, beet root, grays, navy; other styles, handsomely beaded are shown in white and flesh.

Prices Range $7.95, $8.95 and $9.75

Interview with a Beaded Motif

I am a beaded motif. I am not a fad or fancy but a decided fashion decree for fall and winter. You find me everywhere this season, on serge dresses, satin dresses, Georgette dresses, wool dresses.

I hold place of honor on collars and cuffs alike. Belts claim me as well as sash ends. I come in gorgeous colors cunningly blended. Sometimes I wear dark rich colorings to tone down a light dress; but more often I add the bright note necessary in the navy blue and black.

I am round sometimes, again square. I am a pyramid, or an oval, an oblong or a diamond—as fancy dictates. I have headquarters at the House of Kann trimming department; and nowhere south of New York will you find me in greater variety.

I am priced according to size and shape.

Come, Have a Look at the New FALL DRESSES

And see what wonders the dressmakers have made from serges, satins and crepes.

The sure and exquisite taste of a Drezwellsley artist is seen in a chic little dress of navy satin, made with narrow box pleats back and front from shoulder to bottom of dress, with an interruption at the waist line in the shape of a belt, beaded in front with coral-colored beads.

A navy blue Georgette dress that is made up over a Jap silk lining, is in tunic style with a wide band of embroidered crepe finishing off the tunic and a similar broad band of embroidered crepe makes the extremely wide belt.

There are other styles of satin with the new "slip-through" or "criss-cross" belt; finished with white satin Tuxedo collars.

A Drezwellsley model of serge is made in a novel Eton jacket effect; another is in long-waist effect with novelty stitched belt and wide black buckle, box pleated tunic skirt at side, tunic and sleeves finished with military braid. Finished with a white satin Tuxedo roll collar.

The colors of the satin dresses are taupe, beet root, wistaria, navy and black. The serges are in navy, brown, plum and black.
